T U E S D A Y, JULY 16, 1771.

The Speech of the Honourable CONSTANTINE PHIPPS, taken a Committee for enquiring into the Cause of the Riots was appointed.

Mr. Speaker,

I AM heartily glad that you have at last come to the resolution of appointing a Committee of Enquiry. Such an establishment has long been wanting; and many have been the attempts of the Minority to set it on foot. But the Ministerial Champions are never roused but by their own danger. It was in vain that we called upon them to enquire into the causes of the riots in St. George's Fields, at Brentford, and other places. The safety of their Constituents was to them a matter of no moment. Little solicitous about the general weal, they consulted their own private emolument. Provided they could enjoy their places, and pensions, and contracts, in ease and security, they were ready to wink at domestic tumults, as well as foreign encroachments. The same spirit which dictated the relinquishment of our right to Falkland's Islands, and the Manilla Ransom, occasioned the sacrifice of the National Police. But now the evil comes home to themselves: Riot knocks at their door, and will not suffer them to divide with security. What is the consequence? They are alarmed. Their lips tremble, and their hearts palpitate. You may mark out every enemy to his country, by the paleness of his cadaverous face, and visible terror which shakes his frame. Where now is that blustering manner, that insulting tone, and that important attitude, which used to distinguish the Minister? O Mortality! how frail art thou!

---'Tis truth, that god did shake.

His coward lips did from their colour fly,
And that same eye, whose dole did awe the Senate,
Did lose its lustre: I did hear him shriek;
Aye, and that tongue of his, that bade the Members
Mark him, and write his speeches in their books,
Alas! it cry'd, give me your help, Sir William,
As a sick girl. By Heaven, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic Senate,
And bear the palm alone.---Age, thou art shamed!
England! thou hast lost the bread of noble bloods.
But, as for me, I'd rather be a Libyan,
Than to repute myself a Son of England,
Under such hard condition as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

A Committee of Enquiry is now to be established. And for what purpose? Is it in order to trace out the sources of the present disturbances; and to remove the original causes of the national discontents? By no means. This, though the only rational and effectual plan, is not to be adopted. The intention of this Court of high Commission, or rather Inquisition, is to force the people, by fear and terror, into acquiescence. There is no idea entertained of removing the evil thing, the abomination, from among the people. The tyranny, instead of being overturned, is to be established. Instead of giving satisfaction to the people for the open violation of their rights, the Ministers are going to scourge them for not submitting quietly and peaceably to the galling yoke of despotism;---to a burden which neither they, nor their forefathers, were able to bear. Is this a prudent scheme? Is this the way to restore peace, and put a stop to riots? Whoever thinks so, must be little acquainted with the spirit of Englishmen. They must be led like men, and not driven like brute beasts. Their history shews, and I hope it will ever shew, that tyrants, of whatever denomination, whether Kings or Grandees, never enjoyed their power long, or in security.

People may exclaim against riots, and popular tumults, but they will never be severely censured by those who have sense enough to perceive, that we are in greater danger from domestic than foreign foes; and that the mass of the people ought to be indulged with some powers over the enemies of Law and the Constitution, for fear the sacred fire of Liberty and Independence should be totally extinguished among them. That they have proceeded to unjustifiable lengths in attacking the Members of this House, cannot be denied; but it cannot likewise be denied, that the persons who were, on this occasion, the objects of their vengeance, have not acted with that integrity, and that public spirit, which become men in a public capacity. Men, therefore, who have no other way of doing themselves justice for the injury which they think offered to the public, because they are excluded from all share in the choice of Representatives, are excusable when they venture upon these little overt acts of popular justice, which are sanctified by popular prescription. Is it in vain to think of freeing the most perfect system from every inconvenience. Liberty will be occasionally attended with Licentiousness, when Tyranny begins to erect her standard; and it is better to tolerate the short-lived anarchy of the populace, than to remove that controul which they assume over bad Ministers and Magistrates. Their intention is always good; and I believe it will be hard to find an instance in history where they exercised their authority but in opposition to injustice and oppression. The remains of the Feudal System, and of ancient Slavery, which still adhere to our Constitution, have left them without any legal share in the management of national affairs. Is it surprising that they should adopt some equivalent method of redressing grievances.

I should be sorry to see the confusion of the times of Cade, Wat Tyler, and Jack Straw, return. And it is for that reason I would advise you to forbear your intended acts of oppression. For, however much the eye of those times may be disguised, it is easy for a penetrating eye to discover, that the oppression of the rich was the cause of the insurrection. Similar causes will always produce similar effects. The people now think themselves plundered and oppressed: For, let me tell you, your present violence is not the sole cause of this day's disturbance: It is not one or two unpopular acts that will stir up the people against the authority of this House. A series of impolitic measures is necessary; not have these been wanting. What do you think of the Middlesex Election? What of St. George's Fields, and of Brentford? What of inflaming Ireland, of rendering America dissatisfied, and of putting a total stop to our trade? You paid the King's debts, without asking how they were contracted. You approved the Convention, though it cost us above three millions, and secured none of the objects in dispute. Of these, and innumerable other imprudent acts you have been guilty; and yet you vote, that a Committee shall be appointed to enquire into the causes of this day's riot! O fati studium! You must be backward scholars indeed, if you cannot explain the secret. There is no mystery in the case. The matter is clear as noon-day, and he that runs may read. The very men, who propose the enquiry, are themselves the root of the evil. Hi comini prima mali labes. From that Bench sprung every plague, as from Pandora's Box. If you will not be convinced by my assertions, consult the multitude; apply for information to the men of whose irregularities you complain. They will not conceal the truth, but openly tell the same story. Nay, they have told it you already, and in a rougher manner than you could wish. What were their salutations? Instead of shouts and acclamations, which will naturally attend good Ministers, they have regaled you with hisses and execrations. Do not your rent cloaths, and begrimed faces, still bear the marks of their civility? After such strong proofs, such undoubted testimonies, concerning the cause of this popular tumult, how can we be still at a loss for the proper method of proceeding? To me the case is extremely clear. We must begin with a reformation at home. We must follow the maxim of the ancient Philosopher, "Know thyself." Then we shall be better qualified for inquiry into the conduct of others. Upon this plan alone I approve of the Committee. If it be meant only for silencing the natural language of freedom, for tying the tongues and chaining the limbs of freemen, I give it my negative; because I am convinced it will only exasperate and enrage. That, I own, is a good reason why it should be adopted by the Ministry. Their system of politics is founded on fear, not on love. Oderunt dum metuant, is their motto. What a pity it is that fear has now changed sides, and flutters on the Ministerial standard!

From the LONDON PACKET, or NEW EVENING POST, for April 3, 1771.

TO THE KING.

SIR,
THE time has at length arrived, in which you are undeceived, and informed by the testimony of your own senses of the sentiments of your subjects. Last Friday you were feelingly convinced of the great difference between the abject flattery of venal Courtiers, and independent voice of unbought Freemen. Those groans, those hisses, and execrations, with which your ears were saluted, must have at last satisfied you, that the representations of your Ministers were fallacious, and that the body of the people disapproves not only of their, but of your conduct. This truth, indeed, was long ago obvious to every discerning eye. The numerous petitions and remonstrances, which arrived from every uninfluenced part of the kingdom, rendered the matter clear as noon-day. What excuse can your Majesty give for remaining so long hoodwinked? Notwithstanding all the arts of those unprincipled men, who represent all the present ferment as the work of a despicable faction, common sagacity would have taught you, that the majority of the nation is not to be brought into action by words, but by deeds. Had not the misdeeds of your Ministers been notorious, the different counties and large corporations would have still remained quiet; nor would you have been shocked with the sound of, No Lord-Mayor, no King! When a citizen of London can be wrought to such a degree of fury, what can you expect from the more illiterate part of the kingdom? London has been, till now, the bulwark of your family as well as of Liberty; and, when it defects you, it is a clear proof that there is something rotten in the State, that there are some hostile designs formed against the Constitution. No man of common understanding now doubts that this is the case. Your Ministers are fully determined to render the Crown absolute, and to sacrifice the rights of the people to the possession of their places. When matters are thus circumstanced, where is the wonder that there are mobs and tumults? The wonder would be, that there were none. If the people were so tame and pusillanimous, we might conclude that our freedom was gone forever, and that we were come to the calm and silent reign of despotism. Your Minister, I doubt not, imagined that the terrors of the House of Commons had already brought the nation to this blessed state; but he found himself mistaken. He discovered too late that assembly to be formidable no longer than it coincided in opinion with the nation. Being but the representative of the people, it lost its importance, when it does not lean upon them for support. I wish your Majesty may not find the same maxim applicable to you; as you bear the name of Majesty, because you represent the Majesty of the people. Their late treatment of you seems to indicate that they are sensible of this truth. They endeavoured to make you sensible, that you are not a jure divino King, but the creature of the people. These truths may appear bold, and be unwelcome to your delicate ears. Did not the time call for blunt, but wholesome counsel, I would be more tender of your feelings, which undoubtedly have been greatly shocked with the ungracious reception, which was given you lately by eighty thousand unbiassed subjects, I am sorry to say it, but the public cause extorts it from me; unless the present plan of government is altered, you have, I fear, seen but the beginning of sorrows. Suppose that no disaster should happen during your reign? May they not make the Crown of your successor a Crown of thorns? What reparation can your Minister make to your family for the loss of that predilection, which the people have long entertained for it? His head will be but a poor atonement. The people would not have been fully satisfied with the Rains forts et dure, which they intended to inflict upon him, if they had not been prevented by the interposition of a man, who is generally most brave where there is no danger.

ON THE DUTIES OF A PATRIOT KING.

THE Monarch, or Chief Magistrate, of a free form of government, can engage the confidence and affections of his people, only by a sacred observance of those conventions, by which he was chosen to wear the imperial diadem on his brows, and represent the Majesty of the state.

The boundaries of the prerogative of the crown, and the rights and privileges of the people, have so often been contested, so often discussed, that now they are universally known, and determined by written laws.

When encroachments are made, they never fail to produce discontents and enmities, little favourable to those who govern; in the progress of the dispute, respect and obedience to those in high stations are soon lost.

It is not the private virtues of the Minister, or even those of the Sovereign, that will, when the measures of government are violent and arbitrary, screen them from the censures and odium of the judicious part of the people.

The extraordinary talents of the last Minister of the detestable name of Stuart, as an able child-getter, a skilful nurse to his babes, might do him honour amongst the virgins and matrons of the court, whose sole business in life is to promote propagation; but, amongst sober-thinking men, these virtues were thought of as little consequence to the happiness of society, as the boasted chastity of the unhappy Charles the First, who declared, before he laid his head down upon the block, that never had he been guilty of a conjugal infidelity.

It is the public virtues of the Sovereign or the Minister, in which the people are alone concerned; and when infringements are made upon their rights and privileges, it never will fail to produce those intestine convulsions, that so often have shook the pillars of the state, and caused the crown to totter on the brows of the Monarch: the barriers stipulated by Magna Charta and the Bill of Rights, are too strong to be broke down, till absolute despotism is fully established.

The contests between the crown and the people have ever yet been favourable to the latter: how far a change in the national circumstances, from the floods of wealth that have rolled in by an extensive commerce, may have enervated the spirit of the nation, and make the present a favourable period to adopt new principles of government, must be left to time to determine; the contest every day grows more serious, and cannot fail, ere long, to come to a crisis.

The influence of the crown is certainly great; the standing army is numerous, and will soon be commanded by one Prince of the blood; the fleet more powerful than in any other former reign, and doubtless will soon be commanded by the intrepid hero, who hath of late so greatly distinguished himself (in the annals of gallantry) by breaking down the most sacred bands of society. If by his future achievements he brings the same distresses upon the state, as he hath involved the domestic happiness of a benevolent, respectable Peer of the realm, whose family hath always been greatly distinguished for its virtues, and a noble disinterested attachment to their country, his glorious exploits cannot fail of being transmitted with fame to posterity, together with the many other important events, that distinguish the Reign of George the Third.

A passion for unlimited power is predominant in every Court, but hath never been attempted in our own, without throwing the whole state into convulsions, that in wisdom and sound policy ought to have been avoided; for the people have always shewn a due obedience to government, when left in quiet possession of their rights and privileges.

The murmurs and discontent that at present prevail, still more in the provinces than amongst the enervated people of this metropolis, is the more wonderful, as no English Monarch ever first appeared in the robes of royalty, and seated on the throne of Majesty, surrounded with so many singular advantages, as our present gracious Sovereign.

Admired for his private virtues, which appeared more lovely in the bloom of youth; adored for being a native of the country; the people almost intoxicated with happiness at the successes of an extensive war; party distinctions no longer prevailed; the adherents of the exiled family entirely extinct; and the nation unanimous in supporting every measure of government; yet, by the despotic doctrines of a Stuart Minister, poured into the ears of a young, unsuspecting King, all these amazing advantages were soon wantonly trifled away, and anarchy and distraction have since prevailed. The causes are known, the remedy is easy, and alone depends upon---A POPULAR ADMINISTRATION.

[As we would not be thought partial, and only give one Side THE QUESTION a Place in this Paper, we are induced to publish the following, tho' contrary to our political Principles.]

TO THE PRINTER OF THE PUBLIC LEDGER.

THE Patriots of the present hour, like Scrub in the Stratagem, are determined to promote their own ends in their own manner. When Folgar addresses the Lubber of Litchfield with "Save you Master Scrub," the Clown sturdily replies, "Sir I won't be saved your way;" in like manner our popular declaimers think it laudable to oppose the actual welfare of the kingdom, because this welfare is promoted by government. And, with a courage pretty similar to Scrub's, moreover, they declare themselves determined, at the hazard of their lives, to resist all innovations upon their liberties, at the very moment they tamely submit to what they pronounce the greatest ever practised against their rights, since their existence as a people.

I am sensible that many a well-meaning individual has been greatly alarmed at the imprisonment of the two Aldermen in the Tower, and has imagined that no less than a general insurrection must be the immediate consequence among the citizens. The truth however is, the principal citizens of London are all the strenuous friends of government, and hold themselves but little obliged either to the Lord Mayor, or to Mr. Oliver, for attempting to invest a Guildhall Magistrate with a controuling jurisdiction over the representatives of the people. The inferior citizens, indeed the insignificant things from which our Common Council is now elected, pleased with an opportunity of being important, crowd eagerly to the ward meetings, determine decisively on the Privileges of Parliament, and draw up addresses of thanks to their Magistrates for having violated the laws of their Country. But though these worthy patriots will neither allow the House of Commons, nor the Courts of Justice, to be judges of legality;---though the line of judicial rectitude must be drawn in strict conformity to their own prejudices, and though they are incessantly boasting of their readiness to lay down their lives in defence of the constitution; thus wounded by themselves, still few revolutions in the state are to be apprehended from their resentment---Like Shakespeare's clown, their dagger is only worn in their mouths; they are turbulent, but they are contemptible, and their ravings are no more than the impotent result of ignorance and ostentation. Those who are acquainted with the city of London, know well that all its public business is transacted, if we except only the particular province of the Aldermen, not by the opulent or the respectable, but by the lowest members of the community. Even the common council, in the areas of their reputation, Mr. Printer, consisted more of manufacturers than merchants, of retailers than importers, and thought themselves very much distinguished if a gentleman of eminence condescended to be one of their number. On this account, Sir, when we are told that the corporation of London has erected a statue to Mr. Beckford, or when we hear that the gentlemen of Faringdon have visited Mr. Oliver, or that the inhabitants of Candlewick have waited upon the Lord-Mayor with assurances of attachment, we are not to suppose, that the statue is erected by, or the cavalcade composed of, those eminent names, which constitute the principal pillars of our national traffic, and are no less the credit than the support of our commercial existence. No, Mr. Printer, these names hold the proceedings of patriotism in the utmost abhorrence. They are true friends to their King, and are not to be made the despicable instruments of a faction. They are capable of reflecting, Sir, and convinced that the freedom of the subject must at least be as safe when trusted to the discretion of parliament, as when lodged with the all-intelligent livery of London.

Yet, Sir, if we had not the insignificance of our popular declaimers in the city, as a hostage for their peaceable behaviour, we have, to the full as good a security in their apprehension. I do not by any means question their inclination to revolt, but I very much doubt their resolution. Notwithstanding the general narrowness of their judgments, they all know, that we have several insolent acts, which stigmatize insurrection with a most odious appellation, and even make patriotism capital criminal, when rising in rebellion to the established government of the Kingdom. The political reformers in 1715, and 1745, found no great security in their public spirit, Mr. Printer. What they called virtue, the laws were unwieldy enough to term high treason, and the executioner himself was daring enough to do his duty, tho' the patriots, both at Kennington, and Tower-hill, repeatedly told him, that they were suffering in defence of their country.

To justify this argument, Sir, and to remove the groundless fears of the uninformed, on the present occasion, let us only recollect the general scope of all the addresses which have been presented to the imprisoned magistrates by their fellow citizens. Does not each declare that the addressers are sensible, their liberties have been invaded, and that they will defend the two aldermen at the hazard of their lives? Yet, what, after all, is the consequence? Why, the people, who are thus ready to die, go away very quietly, leaving the Lord-Mayor, with Mr. Oliver, to the full enjoyment of their prison, and then Mr. Oliver, with the Lord-Mayor, return thanks for the noble support they have received, in being left entirely to the mercy of their ministerial enemies. Upon the whole, Sir, till we can suppose the addressers like Bay's light troops, to be an army in disguise, I fancy we shall have little to dread from their prowess, besides an illumination night, on the rising of parliament, a manoeuvre of that kind, may indeed, be expected, and will be a proper termination to the daring efforts of a despicable faction.

TO THE PRINTER OF THE PUBLIC ADVERTISER.

SIR,
THE Dark-lantern Junta of Conspirators at Carlton-house having failed in their attempts upon the press by their law oracle, Lord Mansfield, are now making a triple attack to save powder, against the press, the laws, and the people, from the mixed battery of Parliamentary Privilege.

The arms entrusted with them for the defence of their constituents, they have honourably turned against them; and to aid their treacherous assault have called in the Royal Proclamation; by which they have forfeited all future respect and confidence; and have drawn upon themselves the just contempt and indignation of the public. Your specious correspondent Mennon, who pretends that the opposition are attacking their own privileges through the sides of Parliament, and playing into the hands of an arbitrary Minister, knows full well that a corrupt House of Commons are neither the friends nor representatives of the people. He knows they are the most dangerous enemies of the people; and that no Minister can safely attempt to enslave this country, but by the means of such a Parliament. Since, by keeping up the forms of the constitution, when the spirit is departed, he has a considerable check upon the national resentment, which a declared assault upon them, without that sanction, would infallibly draw upon his head. Therefore the people are infinitely in the right to guard themselves in that quarter, from whence is their greatest danger; and if their abandoned Representatives will turn their privileges, i. e. their own arms against them, in ministerial contests, they do well to wrest them, if possible, out of such hands. If they will voluntarily give up, or corruptly sell the only privilege which could be of use to the public, that of speaking freely and acting independently, it matters little to those who made them a parliament, whether they retain any other. The power which originally gave and supported, can easily restore them to honest and worthy delegates, whenever it shall be their good fortune to find them. In the mean time it is hoped the present set will be contented with that capital privilege of selling us at the ministerial Smithfield, and leave it to the Junta to put on our fetters, without incurring the odium of doing it themselves. If indeed we were to regard what the sneering Mennon insinuates, that we have no national spirit of defence left among us, we should be hardly worth carrying to market; for what Prince or Minister will buy what he can take without resistance?

But this Northern Hero of firm nerve and uncorrupt heart, who talks of our being "mellowed down by luxury into a tame submission to despotism," forgets that our rulers, (I beg his pardon) all but our Scotch Masters, are as luxurious and degenerate as ourselves. It is pleasant enough to see this small philosopher, and false prophet, describing us as a nation of Taylors and Weavers. "The hand accustomed to the shuttle and needle (says the solemn noodle) shrinks from the musket and the sword. Should therefore (continues he) oppression stalk forth in her ugliest form, shall the people take arms against her? Alas! Sir, the people know nothing about the implements of death, and when the worst comes to the worst, the tranquility of absolute government will be preferred to the peril of an appeal to arms." This is pitiful, Mr. Printer, wondrous pitiful indeed, and I am persuaded must have been written by some Scotch Taylor, who believes in Predestination and David Hume's lying prophecy. But let the paltry insolent scribbler know, that the nation, whose victories to lately surrounded and astonished the globe, is not afraid of oppression in any form, tho' she assume the shape of the Devil, and appear at the head of all the Highland Clans, with the third Regiment of Guards, her bloody and never-failing instruments.

HALL, Tower-Hill! thy honour's truly great;
Within thee, now, no rebels mourn thy fate.
Rebels and murderers, in these righteous times,
Find friends at Court to varnish o'er their crimes:
Whilst Oliver and Croft, good and true,
Who dar'd be just amongst a venal crew,
Who dar'd the City's Charters to defend,
Nor would, though threaten'd, to oppression bend,
Are sent thy prisoners. Such rewards they share,
Who love their King, and freedom hold most dear.
Patriots like these, to prisons give a grace,
Their virtues gild each solitary place;
Enslaving them, thy walls delight mine eye,
And thou, oh Tower, doth with St. James vie!

WE have an account from the Cherokee country, that the Western Indians have killed four Cherokees, and a man named Joshua Downes.

The Cherokees are endeavouring to get the Creeks to agree to the giving up the lands they propose as a compensation to the traders for their debts, which they (the Creeks) claim by conquest, but it is thought the Creeks will never be brought to renounce their claim. Could it be effected, it would be a considerable addition of a body of good land to this province, as well as advantageous to individuals concerned in the Cherokee-trade, who have large debts there: However the Cherokees are resolved to give it up, and to support their right; upwards of 40 of them, among whom are the greatest men of that nation, are now running the lines of the lands to be given up, and they threaten the Creeks, if they should interfere, to bring upon them several Indian nations with whom they are in alliance.

His Excellency the Governor intending to embark with his family for England next week, was last Monday waited upon by the merchants of this place, who presented an address to him suitable to the occasion; and last night another address was presented to his Excellency by his Honour the Chief Justice and the Assistant-Judges; to which he was pleased to return very polite and satisfactory answers.

On Monday afternoon all the buildings on the plantation of Lord William Campbell, on the Carolina side were destroyed by lightning; the loss occasioned thereby is estimated at about 1000 l. sterling.

BY THE HONOURABLE

WILLIAM BULL, Esquire,

Lieutenant-Governor and Commander in Chief, in and over the said Province.

A PROCLAMATION.

HEREAS Complaint

has been lately made to me by the CATABAW INDIANS, that sundry Persons have molested them in their hunting Grounds, and particularly that about the 12th Day of June last, divers Persons, to the Number of Twenty-six, went to the Camp of a Party of their Nation, destroyed their Skins, and beat them very severely, all which is contrary to the Agreement stipulated in a Treaty for the Preservation and Continuance of a firm and perfect Peace and Friendship between His Majesty and the several Indian Tribes therein named, which was ratified at a Congress, held at Augusta, in the Province of Georgia, on the Tenth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord, One Thousand Seven Hundred and Sixty-three, by their Excellencies James Wright, Esq; Governor of Georgia, Arthur Dobbs, Esq; Governor of North-Carolina, Thomas Boone, Esq; Governor of South-Carolina, the Honourable Francis Fauquier, Lieutenant-Governor of Virginia, and John Stuart, Esq; Agent and Superintendent of Southern Indian Affairs, and the several Indian Chiefs who were authorized and empowered by their respective Nations to ratify and conclude the same; by the second and third Articles of which Treaty, it was concluded and agreed, that His Majesty's Subjects, and the aforesaid several Nations of Indians, should for ever thereafter, be looked upon as one People, and the Governors and Superintendent did engage, for themselves and their Successors, as far as they could, that they would always give due Attention to the Interest of the Indians, and will be ready on all Occasions to do them full and ample Justice: And by the fourth Article of the same Treaty, the Catabaw Head Men and Warriors, did in Confirmation of an Agreement before that Time entered into with the White People, declare, that they would remain satisfied with the Tract of Land of Fifteen Miles Square, a Survey of which by their Consent, and at their Request, was then already begun, and the respective Governors and Superintendent, on their Parts, did promise and engage, that the aforesaid Survey should be completed, and that the Catabaws should not in any Respect, be molested by any of the King's Subjects, within the said Lines, but should be indulged in the usual Manner, of Hunting elsewhere; which Privilege is further confirmed to them by an Act of Assembly of this Province, passed the 23d Day of June, 1769, intitled, "An ACT for the Preservation of Deer, and to prevent the Mischief arising from hunting at unseasonable Times," as it is provided that nothing therein shall extend, or be construed to extend, to Deprive the Indians in Amity with this Province, of any Rights or Privileges, they are entitled unto, by Virtue of any Treaty subsisting between them and this Province. AND WHEREAS it may be attended with bad Consequences to the People of this Province, if such Outrages are not remedied, and for the future prevented. I THEREFORE have thought fit, by the Advice of his Majesty's Honourable Council, to issue this my Proclamation, hereby strictly requiring all His Majesty's Subjects to be careful not to Molest the said Indians, in their Hunting, or in any other Way injure them in their Rights, referred to them by the said Treaty and Act of Assembly. LANDS FOR SALE,

By public Auction, at the Vendue-House in Charles-Town, on Tuesday the 5th Day of September next, at 12 o'Clock,

A Tract on ACCABEE, one of the most beautifully situated country seats in this province, not more than seven miles from Charles-Town by land, and about the same distance by water. The whole contains four hundred acres, three hundred of which are in oak and pine wood, the rest in pasture under fence. The dwelling-house on it is of brick, with a large hall and parlour on the ground floor, and a passage and stairs in an entry between both; there are four bed-chambers above them, exclusive of the garret which has two unfinished rooms. The cellar is very convenient for a kitchen, being built and used for that purpose. On the south front of the house is a new piazza, which overlooks an unimproved garden quite down to the delightful river on which the whole is situated. Opposite to the house and garden, the river is computed to be upwards of a mile wide, and abounds with a variety of fish, oysters, &c. As there is plenty of wood, bricks may be made to advantage, and the number now at the landing will be a sufficient recommendation of the quality of the clay, &c. Vast quantities of lime may likewise be burnt, the shell banks being very contiguous to the landings, and the wood not far to cart.

A Tract at STONO, St. Paul's parish, butting and bounding eastward and southward on lands belonging to the estate of the late Robert McKewen, Esq; and lands of James Stanyarne, Esq; westward and northward on lands of Mr. Isaac Nicolls, deceased, and Algernon Wilson, Esq.

This Tract contains four hundred acres, and is principally adapted for the culture of indigo, corn, &c. the soil being loose and fertile, it will also answer for most European grain; about seventy acres has been cleared, and a tolerable plantation house on it, but being rented out to several tenants, shoemakers, &c. it has been much abused, and at present is out of repair. It is well timbered with oak and pine, and its distance from the public landing at Friend Town, scarce exceeds two miles.

Another Tract at STONO, about a mile nearer the public landing than the above, containing by a re-survey three hundred and seventy five acres, butting and bounding north-eastwardly on land belonging to William Elliott, Esq; (called Winners;) north-westwardly on land belonging to the estate of Robert McKewen, Esq; south-eastwardly on lands belonging to Frederick Grimke, Esq; and south-westwardly on lands belonging to Charles Elliott, Esq. This is a very compact tract, fit for indigo, corn and rice; a great part of this small tract is in wood of oak, hickory, and pine, and affords good cooper stuff for any of the adjacent rice plantations. On it is a pretty good dwelling-house, now rented to Mr. Joseph Dandridge.

A long credit will be given, if desired, paying interest from the delivery of the titles.
